

The Colorado's State Board of Education has adopted the Protection of Individuals from Restraint and Seclusion Act (PPRA), which outlines the procedures to be followed:

- In the administration of restraint and seclusion.
- Staff training.
- Documentation requirements.
- The review of the use of restraint and seclusion.

The Colorado Department of Education has available a self-guided, self-paced Moodle course on PPRA (Protection of Individuals From Restraint and Seclusion Act) Regulations.

This course covers the Restraint and Seclusion Regulations (PPRA) and will also share the changes to PPRA from House Bill 22-1376.

House Bill 22-1376

This training is on the regulation for Restraints and Seclusion and does not replace the requirement of having staff trained in a nationally recognized crisis intervention program, such as Crisis Prevention Institute (CPI), Therapeutic Crisis Intervention (TCI), Quality Behavioral Solutions (QBS) etc.

The course content will be covered in 12 different lessons. Following each lesson will be a check for understanding. Upon successful completion of each of the checks for understanding, participants can receive a certificate of completion for three (3) hours of continuing education credit.

For questions related to this Moodle Course or the content please reach out to Bill Brown the Affective Needs Serious Emotional Disability Specialist with the Colorado Department of Education.
